Oh! give us, plense,
A cooling breeze!
Take back the chance.
We sought to wear our linen pants.
No matter what the cost.
Ve groan for ice and snow and frost,
So-Against sweet sprite of spring.
Cense, you feathered ones, to sing!
Let sleigh bells ring—
That's the thing!

We saw a straw hat on a man's head yesterday.
That was the first one we have seen since we saw that one in our ash barrel at the back gate last october.

Joe West wants us to go to Newport News, Norfolk, Old Point, Ocean View and Virginia Beach with him one day next Sunday, if they will let us get past Williamsburg.

We have no fear about being able to get through Williamsburg, but we have four doubts about going to all the other blaces he mentions in one day, with any degree of pleasure to ourself, the brown eyed one, or the six youngsters.

As soon as the sands get hot, however, we are going to take his advice and dash of to Ocean View.

off to Ocean View.

Alister Louie Gisselbrecht has returned. He went out to Oklahoma to look around and see the country growing in.

"They rent cyclone cellars to you out there," he said, "when you go to a lotel."

"Will you have a room with or without a cellar?" the clerk asks.

A cyclone cellar costs fifty cents more, if its just an ordinary one. But if you want a cellar with magazines and daily papers and electric lights, its costs more. When a cyclone cemes up the clerk lings a bell and sends the boy up to your room with the key to your cellar.

You get up and shave and take a bath, and stine your probability of the cyclone cellar.

After the cyclone passes over, you come out and help the citizens to get their houses and other chattles together. Its always best to take your trunk with you into the cellar, then you stand a clauce of having a clean collar to go home in. home in.

Cyclones are popular things in Oklabona. They are one of the principle products of the country.

Charlie Reinecke broke up Charlie McKee's eigar club. He went into the Bijou office the other day with a Man About Town eigar in his would.

day with a Man About Town cigal in his mouth.

"Just our cheese!" shouted Mister Mekee, as he called his slaves and minlons, including Blair Meanly, Will Tom-Huson, Tee Merryman, Ben Lowry and all the others.

But they didn't know Reinecke.
When that bunch picked itself up from under the table and in the corngr, the place was a wreek, and i'll take the painters and decorators a month to fix things up.

"We were going to take the theatre down anyhow." said McKee, wiping the dist of his plug hat with a silk handker-chief. "But the next time we try to take a cigar from a fellow, we got to know who he is first."

Reliceke continued to smoke and then strolled off to take a walk and get a cup of coffee.
